Statement

TelecityGroup is a leading independent provider of colocation, managed data centre, hosting and connectivity services in Europe. TelecityGroup specialises in the design, build, and management of business-critical web infrastructures, helping companies reduce the cost, complexity and risks associated with maintaining web and online environments. All TelecityGroup services are underpinned by resilient infrastructure, which includes multiple high-tech data centres across Europe.

We recognize our company has an impact to the environment in a number of ways. We wish to minimise these impacts and to this end we have implemented an environmental management system designed around the international standard BS EN ISO14001:2004. This management system will help ensure that we continually improve our environmental performance. This will be achieved by the annual setting of documented objectives, which will be set by the management team and will apply to all our locations.

TelecityGroup is an early adopter of the European Code of Conduct of Data Centres and is a member of the Green Grid.

We are also committed to:

- The prevention of pollution
- Compliance with environmental regulations, laws and codes of practice relevant to each country where we operate.
- Monitoring our carbon emissions, by accurately measuring power consumed and further implementing initiatives designed to maximise efficiency in order to reduce overall impact.
- Recycling and use of recycled materials.
- Ensure that all of its sites store, handle and dispose of any waste in line with local legal environmental requirements.
- Work with suppliers to minimize the effect of purchased products and services impacting the environment.
- Include environmental issues in its training programmes for staff.
- Monitor its performance.

All personnel and contractors will be made aware of this policy before commencing work on behalf of TelecityGroup.
